IMPARTIAL, NOT NEUTRAL.

SHANGHAI, SATURDAY, JAN. 19, 1867.

RETROSPECT OF EVENTS IN CHINA AND JAPAN DURING 1866.

Japan. THE past year has witnessed the commencement and completion of a civil war, which has shown how little able is the Tycoon to exact a more than nominal obedience from the powerful Daimios of Japan. Notwithstanding the complete defeat, involving the loss of all his guns, sustained by him at Simonosaki at the hands of the allies, Chosiu has been able not only to hold his ground against, but to repel, the Government forces, and to extend his own boundaries. The death of the late Tycoon at the moment he appeared to be making a supreme effort to turn the scale in his favour, put an end to a war, in which the Government commanded little sympathy, and which was causing distress and commotion among the people, from the scarcity of provisions to which it was giving rise. It is worthy of note that Chosiu's success is largely attributable to the employment of foreign arms, which the troops of the Tycoon disdained to carry. The men who had fought at Simonosaki, however, had learned wisdom by experience, and were glad to turn against an enemy the weapons of which they had painfully experienced the value.

Strangely enough the effect on a Daimio of fighting with foreigners, seems to be an immediate desire to enter into bonds of the closest amity; whether from the proverbial respect for a worthy foe, or because, as was recently laid down in one of their official documents, they have discovered that foreigners have so much improved in the science of war since the olden days when the Portuguese first visited the country, that it is useless to oppose them—may be a moot question. But, certainly, both Satsuma and Chosiu made overtures of friendship and commerce, directly after the engagements at Kagosima and Simonosaki. Our policy, however, of looking to the central government only—in pursuance of which we have obtained the assent of the Mikado to our treaty—precluded us from entering into the separate negociations which each desired. Their friendly advances, however, have been cordially met; and Sir Harry Parkes' visit to Satsuma will long be remembered with pleasure by all who shared in the festivities by which it was celebrated. The enthusiastic accounts given by the correspondent of the Japan Times, of the feasting and sports by which the Prince and his followers entertained their guests, read more after the manner of the Arabian nights, than a sober episode of the nineteenth century. A contrast involuntarily suggests itself, between the characters of the two neighbouring nations, on their perusal. When we read of a Chinese magnate entertaining with princely magnificence and intelligence a foreign representative, we may hope that some way is being made towards enlightening the dense stupidity of the celestial mind. At present, the Chinese are repelling the intelligence and inventions of the West, with the same assiduity that the Japanese show in acquiring the instruction we can afford. While Pin-ta-jen has acquired the renown of being the first respectable Chinaman who has visited Europe, Japan has sent forth three embassies and a multitude of private individuals, to inspect at home the civilisation of which they have seen a portion of the result at so vast a distance. And now, at the latest, we hear that the young Princes of Satsuma are on their way to visit the Paris exhibition!

On the whole, a better feeling appears to have existed than in previous years, between foreigners and Japanese as a people. We hear less of such outrages as those on Richardson, on Baldwin and on Bird—though calmer consideration has suggested other reasons than international ill-will for the murder of those unfortunate men. True, a Yakonin lately stood in front of Sir Harry Parkes, and half drew his sword in a menacing manner; but he went no further, and has been handed over to the authorities. The apparent disinclination of the Yakonin guard to interfere for the Minister's protection, is the least pleasant feature in this episode, and shows the necessity for the steps now being taken in England to enrol an European bodyguard for his protection.

A commercial convention was concluded on the 25th June, between the English, French, American, Dutch and Japanese plenipotentiaries, by which a system of bonded warehouses was assented to, which has since worked satisfactorily. The revision of the system of monetary exchange was also arranged, on the principle that all foreign coin and bullion be exchanged in future, value for value. Complete liberty has been given to any Japanese subject to trade or travel abroad under a passport from the Gorogio, which is freely granted on application; and a great obstacle to freer intercourse with foreign nations, thus removed. The tariff of duties attached to the convention excited some expressions of disapproval, which were conveyed to the ministers in the form of a written exposition of their unfairness.

A great fire at Yokohama, which destroyed a large portion of the settlement and property estimated at some $2,000,000, closes the record of the year. All the insurance offices were badly hit; the China Fire, amongst others, has settled for $260,000. Out of the evil, however, some good appears likely to ensue. The settlement will be rebuilt on a much more convenient model; some rising ground which has been much coveted for residences has been conceded by the Japanese, and a park and public gardens are likely to be formed

A good deal has been said and written about Sir Edmund Hornby's decision on a point connected with the sale of a share in the North-China Insurance Company, belonging to the bankrupt estate of Mr. R. Mackenzie. The Company have a clause in their deed providing that shares shall be allotted and sold, only to persons approved by the Board of Directors; the object of course being to admit as shareholders only persons likely to contribute to the Company's business. The rule is no doubt a wise one, and it is to the advantage of every shareholder to recognise it, in selling or transferring his share. But in the case at issue the question arose as to whether the clause in question were legally binding; whether the official assignee of a bankrupt shareholder were restrained by it from disposing of a share, except to such person as the Directors might approve; or whether he were not bound, in the interest of the creditors, to sell it to the best purchaser. Sir Edmund Hornby took the latter view, the soundness of which has been impugned. Of course the business of a Company may be expected to depend in a great degree upon the influential position of those who compose it, or upon the extent of their property. But if any directors hope to insist successfully upon a position or a property qualification, however loosely they may assign the standard in their own minds, they must at least fix a definite limit in the instrument that conveys the shares under their supervision. They need not be bound by this limit. As an act of grace, they might lower it in certain cases. The Captains in the service of the Peninsular and Oriental Company do, as a matter of fact, retire upon a pension of three or four hundred pounds a year, but it is equally a matter of fact that they could not enforce the payment of this retirement. Again, an Insurance Company could never maintain it to be of the essence of their contract, that a particular purchaser and no other should be the holder of their shares. And yet this must be established by them before, in the case of bankruptcy, such a privilege as is claimed could accrue to their Board. The assignees of Landseer or Millais might not have a right to adopt an incomplcted contract and finish a picture because the personal skill of either of these distinguished artists would be of the essence of the engagement.

The case of Robinson and the Alliance Bank versus the Chartered Mercantile Bank, just glanced at by our contemporary, tells most strongly in favour of the opinion expressed by the Chief Judge. Mr. Robinson deposited with the Alliance Bank the certificates of some shares held by him in the Chartered Mercantile Bank, and as is usual, though not necessary in an equitable mortgage, agreed to execute a transfer of the shares to the Bank or its nominees whenever required to do so. The Deed of Settlement of the Chartered Mercantile Bank contains the following among other articles—

"Subject to the provision of these presents, any shareholder may sell or transfer all or any of his shares to any person approved by the Court.

"No person not being a lawful claimant of a share shall be entitled to become a transferee of a share unless and until he be approved by the Court."

The Alliance Bank, some eighteen months after the deposit, wished to sell the shares. But the Chartered Mercantile Bank refused the form of transfer, and grounded their refusal on the two articles we have transcribed. The master of the Rolls however held that the power claimed by the Bank must be exercised reasonably. And in this definition of the reasonable exercise of such power, he would not, until the question had been fully argued before him, hold the nominee of a rival Bank disqualified. It must be remembered too that Mr. Robinson did not appear before Lord Romilly as a bankrupt. Any inference therefore drawn from the case we have cited, would apply with additional force to that of Mr. Mackenzie. The words "lawful claimant," about the true interpretation of which the Master of Rolls was not at all clear, have a more extended meaning than the framer of the article in which they occur, probably intended. In the case of a bankrupt, it is hard to say who could with better reason be held the lawful claimant, than the official assignee.

Summary of the Week.

We are glad to find from the annual Report by the trustees of the Seaman's Church, that a sum of Tls. 2,350 has already been collected, with which it is intended at once to commence building. A plan of a very simple but pretty little edifice has been drawn by Mr. Oliver, and the Municipal Council, the Report tells us, have given a site on Pootung point. We were not aware that they had any right or jurisdiction over that side of the river; but gladly waive the doubt when so laudable an object is in view. The building is expected to cost Tls. 3,500, towards completing which amount the sale of the present hulk is expected to contribute $100, and there are certain stores given over by Mr. Fitzroy, worth about $250. These sums, with Tls. 106 collected since the balance sheet was drawn up, will raise the available funds to Tls. 3,200 and a sufficiently liberal subsidy is hoped from Government, not only to cover the deficiency, but to leave funds for running up a reading room. Another difficulty remains to be met, namely the residence of the chaplain, as the sale of the hulk will deprive him of his present quarters. The suggestion has been made, and we cordially endorse it, that he should be considered resident chaplain at the Sailors' Home. So many complaints are made about that institution that the presence of a chaplain could not be otherwise than beneficial.

The report of the Shanghai Library during the past year, shows a slight falling off in the number of subscribers.

The Comptoir d'Escompte has given notice that the Tls. 75,000 owing to it on account of the Municipal loan, must be repaid in four months—that is, early in May next. The means of complying with this request will form a pleasing topic of discussion for the Land Renters, at the annual meeting in April.

Trefiancha farm has been sold at auction for Tls. 2,700. The house opposite the Grand Stand, lately occupied by Mr. Dore, for Tls. 605. A plot of land measuring 18 mow adjoining Birt's bungalow brought Tls. 360, and a half share in another plot measuring 35 m. 6 f. near the Stone Bridge, Tls. 160.

Twenty gentlemen have enrolled themselves as members of the FOOT PAPER HUNT, and it is hoped to add considerably to this number. The days of meeting are Wednesday and Saturday. The course, on the former day, to be chosen by pedestrian "foxes," on the latter to be the same as that followed by the ponies.

HANKOW advices report that the Nienfei are still pursuing their way westward, with the intention, it is surmised, of gaining a position on the Han and Yangtze above Hankow, and making a descent on Woochang from an opposite direction to that they chose last year.

OUR NINGPO correspondent mentions the occurrence of a large fire on the Quantung side of the river, on the 9th instant, by which it is estimated that $ 50,000 worth of property and goods, and upwards of a hundred houses were destroyed. He again refers to the salt question, and the brilliant prospects that would open out for Ningpo, if it could be made a central depot. At present, there is nothing to be done there, but go to the Lakes shooting. Wild geese and other water fowl are to be found there in thousands, but the weather has not been cold enough to make them tame.

SHANGHAI—PAST AND PRESENT.

WE have before us a Hong List for 1852 and a Hong List for 1867; the one containing only forty names of foreign houses—the other more than three hundred; the one issued when the only Chinese residents were the few who had not yet been disturbed in possession of their original tenements—the other when the native population within the English settlement alone numbers about 70,000. It must be strange to the few old residents who can remember those primeval days, to compare the two; and to note the changes that have taken place; to recal Toong-foo as "The Commercial House," and the old Bank of India as "Victoria Hotel;"—when Hongkong Street was occupied by native docks, and the Maloo not yet dreamed of; when the old Race Course was still the scene of exciting struggles, and the banks of the Yang-king-pang were a mere suburb of the native city. For there are still some left in the settlement who can remember the pulling down of the old E-wo on the new year's eve of 1852-3, and the bonfires on the Bund with which the residents in those days were wont to celebrate the festival;—when Kungping was ruled by Sykes, Schwabe, and the North China Herald shone in solitary splendour under the management of H. Shearman; when the men who have given their names to firms were active partners, and many of their successors were still assistants in the hong; when Rutherford Alcock was Consul, and the Supreme Court had not entered into the imagination of the wildest dreamer; when medical practitioners were but three, and lawyers had not yet set foot on the soil. The Fives' court stood alone in those days, unencumbered by China houses and unrivalled even by the Racquet Court. One of Messrs. Olyphant's godowns was habitually used as a theatre, and the site of the Club had not yet been purchased from its native owners. Jarvie, Thorburn's and Fletcher's were not established in 1852; while Lindsay's and Blenkin, Rawson's were in high esteem. W. R. Adamson had not yet aspired to the dignity of a firm, and shared with W. Broughall the silk inspection of the port. The Oriental was the only bank, and J. Wright was a Cabinet maker.

From a small foreign settlement, Shanghai has since then grown to be a great commercial emporium. Business has greatly altered, but it has also wonderfully increased. The commerce of the Yang-tze, of the North, and of Japan has since come to swell its trade, and foreign steamers by dozens ply to and from it, on the coast and in the Yang-tze. Three Mails instead of one disturb the tranquillity of its merchants, and telegrams via Kiachta anticipate by a month the news which the P. & O. were formerly the first to bring. Yet, in the face of this enormous developement of trade and communication, the growl is uttered that Shanghai has run its course, and that the days of profitable business have departed. Those who say so can hardly have looked back to its early days, or must entertain an opinion little flattering to foreign, as compared with native, enterprise. Doubtless, fortunes are not to be made with the ease, now, that they were in 1852; because, though business has largely increased there are hundreds more to share it. But those who remember the fate of other new ports which, from exceptional causes, have risen to a sudden and unexpected pitch of prosperity, will hardly condemn the prospects of Shanghai because it has undergone a reaction from the piping days of 1862-3 and 4. Many have succumbed in the struggle, and many others have been sorely tried. But those who remain will hardly allow a trade of £30,000,000 annually to slip through their hands, without culling some of the profits involved.

PAPER HUNTS.

The rain reduced the meet on Saturday afternoon to the smallest of the season; not more than a dozen ponies putting in an appearance. These, however, had a capital run of about an hour and a quarter, the majority keeping well together till the finish. The scent led from Overwey's bungalow across the narrow wooden bridge, on which the rider of Peter Simple very wisely declined to trust himself, preferring to plough through the bed of the creek. There, parallel with the creek over one or two awkward jumps which brought several to grief, and back over the second bridge into the well known country at the back of Sikaway. Somewhere in this district, we regret to hear, one of the foxes came to condign grief, his pony falling off a bridge about twenty five feet high. Most fortunately, the rider disentangled himself, and while his pony bucked itself in the mud of the creek, fell on his own account in another direction, alighting on his legs of paper which saved him from harm. Some such catastrophe would seem to have been anticipated, as three foxes, instead of the usual couple, had started. But the accident must have disturbed their equanimity, as they at once made tracks via Fahwa to Sikaway, where the hunt found paper leading directly into the bar of the Hermitage, and the wounded fox waiting to insist on each man taking a drink as part of the programme. Here they learned that the foxes had only got a quarter of an hour's start, and followed them at a rattling pace, over the jumps on the left side of the road through the Sikaway village, across the bridge and away to the back of the Fahwa; back again, by a double, round or through the well-known bamboo plantation at a corner of the road near that charming village, and away again in the direction of Jessfield. On nearing the parallel of the Bubbling Well, however, the scent curved inwards and the foxes were here descried quietly smoking cheroots in happy ignorance of the proximity of the Hunt. Directly they discovered their danger, they were off at a rattling pace down the stereotype line of jumps at the back of the Bubbling Well road and into Myburgh's compound with the Hunt close on their traces. Here, both their pcnies at first refused the ditch and took at the side road; but they were got over just as the Hunt was on them, and rattled away down the road a few yards ahead of their pursuers. Mr. Despard, whose pony also baulked at the same jump and carried away a rail in a side leap, was the first to catch the red cowl, nearly at the Grand Stand—several other ponies in so close attendance that it would be invidious to discriminate between them.

Only four men turned up at the West Gate yesterday, at the appointed hour, for the paper hunt, others we presume, being deterred by fear that the snow would make the ground too heavy. If so, they were much deceived, and lost a capital run of about 6 or 7 miles over a country unequalled for roughness and diversity of feature. The fox had gone away over a creek at the back of the village and across a range of graves to the neighbourhood of the French Stockade, where a lot of capital jumps gave the hounds plenty of amusement till they came to a pond, which presented so enticing a surface of ice that they were unable to resist the temptation to indulge in a few minutes recreation. On again over more jumps, across ascertained mathematically to be of the best possible thickness capable of bearing no stone—nearly to Ton-ka-doo. Here the scent began to trend homewards, and had across the fields, with a creek at irregular intervals, to the creek running alongside the road to the South gate, across which the scent lay. The foxes by a lucky dash had contrived to slide across and land safely. But the ice which had borne them easily, gave way under the weight of four hunters who all tried to cross it together, and a Scotch cap which had been showing well to the fore disappeared and a cloud of spray and mud, followed almost immediately by a pair of knickerbockers which had played a distinguished part at the jumps, and looked very like winning. A white hat and a black one got safely across, and started for a few hundred yards spin up the road, at a rattling pace, in pursuit of the foxes who had waited in evident expectation of a catastrophe. The two waistcoats, however, over-weight carried by the black, proved too much for him, and white came in an easy winner.

BANKRUPTCY COURT.

Private expenditure for the year preceding bankruptcy about Tls. 6,000.

Mr. KENNIE appeared for the bankrupt, and Mr. MYBURGH for the Agra and Masterman's bank.

Mr. JOHNSTON, on behalf of Messrs. Jardine & Co., claimed Tls. 2,112.42 on balance of account which was admitted.

Mr. BAYNE on behalf of the Bank of Hindustan claimed Tls. 8,302.49 on balance of account, against which the Bank hold a share in the North China Insurance Company, which was admitted subject to an application to sell the share.

THE CHIEF JUDGE.—An application has been made by the Bank of Hindustan to sell this share. How although there is a clause in the Deed of Settlement of the North China Insurance Office, that no shares can be sold excepting to such person or persons as the Board of Directors may approve, I am of opinion that when a shareholder comes into bankruptcy the Court can compel the Company to accept the best purchaser, meaning by the best purchaser he who will give the most for the share or shares. It is the duty of the official assignee to look after the interests of the creditors irrespectively of those of the company. The Bank who are the equitable owners of the share should make an application in the regular way to the Court to call them direct the legal owner, the official assignee, to sell the share for the benefit of the Bank; or it will direct him to make the transfer to the party accepted by the Office, on his terms that the tender is made for the share known to him, in order that he may judge whether or not the best price offered has been accepted.

Mr. STEWART on behalf of the Oriental Bank Corporation claimed Tls. 27,891.07 on balance of account which was admitted, also Tls. 11,183.45 which was admitted, also Tls. 24,307.84. Against the last claim the Bank held shares in two Insurance Companies viz:—one in the North China and three in the China Fire. The consideration of this claim was adjourned until an application for sale of the shares should be made.

Mr. MYBURGH claimed for the Agra and Masterman's Bank on a balance of account, Tls. 13,734.45 which was admitted. He stated that he intended applying for the sale of the shares of which his clients held the equitable share. It was also his intention on behalf of his clients to oppose the discharge of the bankrupt, as much with the view of preventing the delivery of the order of discharge or its agreement sine die, as with a view of endeavouring to get it given coupled with some condition as to future acquired property or salary. Mr. Myburgh considered that he would be able to show he was justified, at least to this extent, in the opposition he proposed to offer. It would be necessary for him to examine the bankrupt, but under the circumstances he should prefer availing himself of an agreement suggested as necessary, to enable him to examine the accounts filed and he should also be prepared to enter into the case fully.

THE CHIEF JUDGE decided to hear the arguments at another meeting, necessitated by the illness and absence of the official assignee.

The case was accordingly adjourned until the 30th instant.

Messrs. DENT and Co., per W. Haussen attorney for Hamilton, Grey and Co. of Singapore—Balance of account admitted Tls. 59 155.

A claim of Tls. 1520.84 by the China Insurance company in respect of unpaid Premiums on policies of Insurance. Against this the company sought to retain Tls. 1359.18 dividends due on their shares in the above company, and also the proceeds Tls. 1164, of the two shares sold they being willing to hand over the balance to the assignees.

The consideration of this claim was adjourned.

Commercial Bank Corporation by the liquidator claimed Tls. 9390.52 in respect of a dishonoured bill for £2,800—Tls. 9020.146 estimated at 6.2½.

This claim was admitted with interest and charges.

Messrs. SMITH ELDER & Co., through the official assignee claimed £209.9.7.

This claim was admitted.

There being no opposition to the bankrupt's discharge it was accordingly granted.

Mr. MYBURGH said he should not apply for the declaration of a further dividend in consequence of an arrangement having been come to between the assignees of the bankrupt and the trustees of the estate of Buchanan, Hamilton & Co., which required some consideration to understand, and which would materially affect the amounts which the different bill-holders under the estate of Jarvie Thorburn & Co., might have to receive. It appeared that a remittance fund had been created, out of which the bill-holders would have to receive a portion of the amount of their proofs, so that they would be paid a dividend out of the bankrupt's estates and out of this fund. It would therefore be inexpedient to declare a dividend, inasmuch as if too much were paid to firms also in liquidation, it would be difficult perhaps to get the excess repaid.

Mr. MYBURGH also applied for leave to be given to the assignees to make payment for services rendered by a Mr. Barnard, the professional accountant employed by them in the preparation of the bankrupt's accounts, as they were very complicated and extended over a long time.

Leave was granted.

An application was made for remuneration to the creditors' assignees.

THE CHIEF JUDGE, however, did not think the Act gave him power to sanction any payment to the creditors' assignees by way of remuneration for services. All he could do would be to sanction any expenses they had incurred in the performance of their duties. If, being professional men, such as accountants, they had acted professionally and such professional assistance had been necessary then he would sanction their being paid. In this case however, a professional accountant had been appointed and payment for his services had been sanctioned.

SUMMARY JURISDICTION.

Before C. W. GOODWIN, Esq.

January 15th.

JOHN CHAPMAN, a seaman, was brought up by a French policeman on a charge of having stabbed him.

LAFONT.—I am a policeman. On Sunday I was on duty in the Rue de Consulat. Towards midnight I saw several Europeans pointing at me and saying "policeman." I called a comrade and we went to the place together. I saw the accused knock down a Chinaman, and we arrested him. He pulled a knife out and knife and wounded me badly in the shoulder. My comrade also was severely wounded. We went to the police station and gave a description of the prisoner, who was apprehended. I swear that is the man who wounded me. The affair took place at a quarter past ten. The prisoner was not drunk.

GEORGE CLARK.—I keep a public house in the Rue de Consulat. On Sunday evening at about half past six, the prisoner came to it and asked for brandy, but had no money. He kicked up a row, and I turned him out. About eight o'clock he came back with a knife. There were two French policemen by. I spoke to them, but they did not understand me. The prisoner was with some Chinese girls. He told the French police that the girls had stolen his money. The two policemen took him in charge to take care of him. There are oil lamps in the street. The knife had a blade about six inches in length. The blade was run up his sleeve, he was in liquor. He had one glass of brandy in my house which my partner gave him.

LAFONT re-examined. I arrested the accused about twenty minutes past ten. I had not arrested him before on that day. I had seen him. I arrested him because I saw him strike a Chinese. The Chinaman was calling "police." There was a woman there. He struck the Chinaman with his hand.

ASSYEHUN.—I am a watchman. The night before last I was standing near the French Consulate and saw police struggling with a foreigner. Shortly after the foreigner ran off. I proceeded with others and the police and caught him not far from the Consulate. I ran after him all the way. He did not run a great distance. I saw there had been a quarrel and that police were running after the man. The police took the man to the station. I do not know him.

The prisoner stated that he had had a glass or two, and had lost his way; he was arrested by the French police and taken to the station, where he was placed in irons and badly kicked about the back.

The case was adjourned until the next day for the evidence of the policemen who took the prisoner in custody.

January 16th

A sergeant of the French police was called and deposed—On Sunday evening two of our constables went on duty at about eight o'clock. Soon after ten they came to the station, and said they had been wounded by an Englishman but that he had escaped. I went out with two of our constables in search of the prisoner. Some one told me the person who had wounded the constables was the second mate of the British brig Adeline. One of the constables stopped the prisoner and asked him who he was. He stated that he was the second mate of the Adeline. I cannot say who told me the person we were in search of was the second mate of the Adeline, but it must have been, I should say, the master of the public house or some one connected with it. When we took the prisoner we searched him, but found nothing on him. The prisoner made no resistance. I went away, however, by the direction of the superintendent to look after some of the prisoner's associates, and whether the prisoner showed any signs of violent conduct in my absence or not, I do not know. The house is one frequented by sailors.

The prisoner in answer to a question from the Magistrate said that he had about forty dollars as wages owing to him.

The Magistrate recapitulated the evidence to the prisoner, and asked whether he wished to question the witness or what he had to say in his defence. The prisoner said pretty much what he did yesterday viz.—that after having taken a glass or two he went down to look about for a sampan when two police officers came up one on each side of him and took him off to the French police station, where he was put in irons and badly kicked about the back.

The Magistrate was satisfied the charge had been proved as laid. The prisoner had evidently been drinking, but not to such an extent as to prevent his knowing what he was about. He was noisy and inclined to be quarrelsome. Two of the French police interfered, either to take care of him or to prevent his making a disturbance. He attacked and wounded both of them with a knife, which it was proved by the barman of the German public house that he carried in his sleeve. They were severely injured and their clothes torn. The Magistrate would not tolerate such a proceeding. The police must not be exposed to such treatment as they had received at the prisoner's hands, but protected in the discharge of their duties. The prisoner alleged that he was ill-treated by the French police. If so, and there was only his word in support of the allegation—such ill-treatment must have been received after the brutal assault charged and proved, had been committed. Such assault would not justify the prisoner's ill-treatment, but the Magistrate was not disposed to believe the prisoner had been subjected to any great violence at all. The Magistrate would mark his sense of the prisoner's conduct by sending him to jail for three months, there to undergo hard labour. The prisoner's wages would be devoted to the hospital expenses of the men he had injured and to the repair of their clothing, and any balance would be applied to his maintenance while in prison.

MIXED COURT.

January 18th.

Before CHALONER ALABASTER, Esq.,

HSU WEI-YUEN.

CHEN WEI-YUEN.

MACKENZIE & Co. v. MYCHE.

The plaintiff stated that on the 27th December, Myche purchased at auction forty-four cases of kerosine oil, but was willing to take delivery of twenty cases only. The plaintiff insisted on all or none being taken, and now came before the Court to compel delivery being taken of all the cases with the payment of such loss as might have been sustained by their being on hand since the day of the auction.

The case was adjourned for the production of the terms of the sale.

WILKINSON v. FOHKEE.

On the 2nd June, the plaintiff sold to Fohkee a quantity of rice of which on the 25th idem, he cleared a certain portion only, and the remainder of the contract was cancelled. For a thousand peculs cleared on the 25th of June, Fohkee had to pay Tls. 2,200. This he did by an order for Tls. 1,400 on a native bank that, was met, and by an order for Tls. 800 on his hong that was dishonoured. Of this Tls. 800, the defendant paid Tls. 200 and for the remainder gave two promissory notes for Tls. 300 each on his own hong, secured by a Chinaman Pingkee. Neither of these notes had been paid. The defendant pleaded a cross account with the complainant.

The Court directed that the cross account be settled separately and ordered him to pay the Tls. 600 within eight days.

T. KHOBS v. LIN-ZUH-CHUN.

On the 7th December last Lin-Zuh-chun went to the plaintiff's office and there stated his wish to buy nine cases containing 178 pieces of velvet.

The velvet was sold, Tls. 50 paid as bargain money and delivery was to be taken at once.

A little time ago he paid the plaintiff's Tls. 150 and again Tls. 35.40, and took one case of the velvet to the value of Tls. 156.20, saying that he would return in the afternoon, pay for all the velvet and take delivery of the remaining eight cases.

This the defendant however, had not done, and the plaintiffs prayed that he should be compelled to take delivery of the velvet and pay the money.

The defendant admitted the contract, but pleaded illness as a reason for not having completed the purchase.

The Court ordered delivery to be taken and the money to be paid within eight days.

JARDINE MATHESON & Co., v. KIN CHE-QUI.

Mr. JOHNSON appeared for Jardine, Matheson & Co.

Mr. MYBURGH appeared for several Chinese silk merchants to watch the case.

Mr. JOHNSON asked that the case be adjourned until Kin Chequi should be forthcoming.

The COURT granted the application.

BOURJAU, HUBENER & Co. v. FOONG-TAE-HONG.

This was a claim for $288.32.

Foong-tae-hong in April chartered the Karine for a voyage from Chefoo to Swatow. The vessel was disabled in the river by getting on the North Bank, and was subsequently sold by order of the Supreme Court. The plaintiffs had received $1,000 as advance on the charter party. The plaintiffs now claim from the defendants Tls. 258.32 as general average.

The Court adjourned the case.

The Prussian Consul we may state had decided that Bourjau, Hubener & Co. could not be compelled to refund the Tls. 1,000.

GLOVER & Co. v. SHEN-YUE.

This was a claim of Tls. 233.12, the balance of freight on 9,511 piculs of millet conveyed by the Corea from Newchwang. The defendant said that there were not more than 9,000 piculs, and at the Custom-houses in Newchwang and Shanghai the number of piculs had been passed as 9,000 also. The bill of lading was produced for 9,000 piculs of millet. In the absence of the plaintiff, the Court gave judgment for the defendant with costs.

THE SHANGHAI LIBRARY.

The Annual meeting was held at the Library on the 15th instant, the Revd. C. H. Butcher in the chair, when the following report by the Committee for 1866, was laid before the meeting.

"In laying the accounts of the Society for the year 1866 before the meeting, your Committee regret to have to report a considerable and unfavourable difference between Income and Expenditure consequent upon the limited amount of subscriptions received during the past year, but they trust that in the present year, the institution will meet with better support. They may remark, however, that only about Tls. 200 of the adverse balance properly belongs to 1866, as sundry payments have been made in advance on account of 1867, and a sum of Tls. 140 will be received this month for account of last year.

The total number of subscribers during 1866 was 87, and nearly 200 new works have been added to the Library since last meeting.

Balance from 1865..... Tls.	41.56
Subscriptions for 1866.....	1,467.98
Balance	460.45
Tls.	1,909.99

The committee have also to report with regret that much dissatisfaction continues to be caused by the persistent infraction of the rules of the Society on the part of many of the Subscribers, and to remedy this as far possible, they have instructed the Librarian to act strictly in accordance with these rules in every case and to stop the issue of Books to any member who fails to observe them.

The report having been approved of and adopted, the following gentlemen were unanimously elected as the committee for the ensuing year—Messrs. Winchester, Butcher, Haussen, Lawrance and Anderson.

SEAMEN'S CHURCH SHANGHAI.

Annual Report, 1866.

The Trustees of the Seamen's Church lay before the Subscribers their Annual Report, and Accounts for the year ending 31st December 1866.

As compared with 1865, the revenue has been steadily maintained. Tls. 600 have been recovered from the Credit Dependency referred to in last Report, and in the absence of any extraordinary expenditure the balance due the Treasurer has been reduced from Tls. 760.2.9 to Tls. 117.1.9.

The usual services have been held in the Floating Church on the Sundays throughout the year, at which the attendance in general has been highly satisfactory.

The Chaplain has ministered to the spiritual wants of Seamen in the Consular jail (partially), the Sailors' Homes, and the General Hospital. The pastoral visits on board ships of all nationalities have been continued; the Reading Room and Library have been efficiently conducted; and the results of these exertions have been in many cases gratifying and encouraging.

There can be no more tangible proof of the appreciation of these services than the liberal contributions received from the seafaring population during the last twelve months, through the medium of the Captain's Committee lately organized by the Chaplain, and with the valuable assistance of W. H. Tapp, Esq., of H. B. M. Consulate. From this source alone upwards of $1,600 have been collected, of which $1,300 have been devoted to the Building Fund of the New Church, and the remainder to defray current expenses. This liberality, added to that of the Shanghai Community, has accumulated in the hands of the Trustees a sum of Tls. 2,344.2.6, with which they feel themselves warranted in taking immediate steps towards the erection of a permanent Church on shore. The Municipal Council has kindly granted a convenient site on the Pootung Point. Plans of the proposed building are in course of preparation, and it is hoped the whole will be completed in six or nine months from the present date.

The Trustees take this opportunity of acknowledging their obligations to their zealous Chaplain, Rev. M. Kaufmann, without whose advocacy and personal exertions the above-mentioned results would not have been achieved—of tendering their thanks to Captain Des Landes, the President, and the Members of the Captains' Committee, and to W. H. Tapp, Esq., for their active co-operation,—and also to many friends, who during the past year have contributed books and Newspapers to the Library and Reading Room.

Messrs. Gamwell and Cuthbertson having resigned, in consequence of their departure for England, Messrs. Fitzroy and Heinsen have accepted the position of Trustees, with Mr. A. A. Hayes, Jun., who will act as Treasurer.

Cordial of the Benedictine Monk of the Abbey of Fecamp.

THIS Liqueur which dates from 1510, is Tonic, Anti-apoplectic, Digestive, and of an exquisite flavour. The Salutary Plants of which it is composed are gathered on the Cliffs of Normandy, they possess all the vivifying emanations of the Northern Sea, and compose one of the best Cordials and one of the most efficacious preservatives against epidemic diseases.

Latterly the French Medical men have almost unanimously prescribed it for patients who by their gastric tendency were more subject to attacks of FEVER AND CHOLERA. May be had of

A. Logrand Aine, at Fecamp.
